➤ Summary / Inv.

- “now” (today) is the only time we have to live for the Lord

- 2 Cor. 6:2 now (today) is the day of salvation

- illus.: don't wait, may run out of time – make the best of your time

- Gen. William Nelson, a Union general in the Civil War, was consumed with the battles in Kentucky when a brawl ended up in his being shot, mortally, in the chest. He had faced many battles, but the fatal blow came while he was relaxing with his men. As such, he was caught fully unprepared. As men ran up the stairs to help him, the general had just one phrase, "Send for a clergyman; I wish to be baptized." He never had time as an adolescent or young man. He never had time as a private or after he became a general. And his wound did not stop or slow down the war. Everything around him was left virtually unchanged--except for the general's priorities. With only minutes left before he entered eternity, the one thing he cared about was preparing for eternity. He wanted to be baptized. Thirty minutes later he was dead. (SermonIllustrations.com. Christian Times, October

3, 1994, p. 26)

- if we don't live for the Lord today, we can't die for Him later – lost eternally in our sins

- inv.: be right with God now (today) – don't wait – may be your last chance (not scare, but warn)
