Hero, 10, died saving sister

Paul Britton

15/ 9/2007 Manchester Evening News (England) – parts omitted for sermon illustration

A BOY of 10 who gave his life to save his drowning step-sister has been hailed a hero.

Jordon Lyon jumped into a pond in Wigan when Bethany Ganderton, eight, got into difficulties.

Two anglers saw Bethany `clinging' on to Jordon as he tried to reach the side.

John Collinson, 63, and Albert Wright, 66, used a rod and a net in a bid to save them.

Albert waded in and took hold of Bethany but Jordon slipped underneath the water due to her weight, an inquest in Bolton was told.

Paramedics fought to revive the unconscious boy, who was not breathing, and he was airlifted to the Royal Preston Hospital. He later died at Royal Manchester Children's Hospital, Pendlebury.

"Clearly Bethany would not have survived if someone did not help. The person who went to help was Jordon, without any fear for himself or his own safety.

"The weight of Bethany no doubt pushed him under the water. The fact that Bethany is still here today is a tribute to Jordon and the fishermen. He died a hero.

Jordon gave his life to save Brittany – Jesus gave His life to save us all

The feelings Brittany has for Jordan should be the feelings we have for God and Jesus – and much more

- God gave Son / Jesus gave self
